

Darcy Howell

Text to Accompany The Flight of the Butterfly

Ever since I can remember my Grammie and I have had a special connection. We both have a love for art, the ocean, and butterflies. When I was little I would sleep in my Grammie's art room whenever I visited her in Maine. She had a butterfly garland that hung across the window. Now that she has moved, the same garland is hanging above my bed. Butterflies as well as being a symbol of my grandmother, are also a great representation of intergenerational themes. As butterflies age they become beautiful. This is just like how people become more wise throughout their life.